Sharing Stories and Building Community in the Local Food System.

Tuesday, Oct. 15 at 6:30p

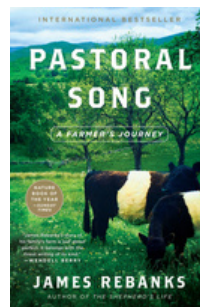

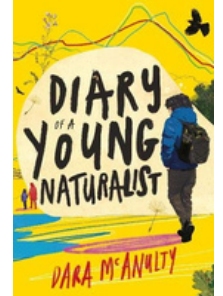

In honor of the Wisconsin Science Festival and its focus on agriculture this year, we'll introduce you to Jules Reynolds. Jules' 2024 dissertation is the result of a 4-year collaboration with producers and Brix Cider, known as the Brix Project, exploring how telling the stories of local food producers impacts food systems. Several Savor the River Valley members participated in the project. They'll join us, too, to share their thoughts and stories.

Gerrymandering. It's a big word for a big mess when it comes to how legislative district maps are drawn in Wisconsin. It is not new. "Republicans did it in Wisconsin; Democrats did it in Illinois; it's not a partisan issue, it's an abuse of power issue," says Former Wisconsin Senate Majority Leader Tim Cullen. Cullen will share how and why gerrymandering wound its way into national and Wisconsin politics and what might be done to plot a straighter map to Wisconsin's future.
